I. INTRODUCTION

Anemia is defined as a low number of red blood cells in a routine blood test, anemia is considered as low haemoglobin or hemocrit. According to WHO statistics over 5% of world population are suffering from hearing loss. 34 million children are suffering from hearing impairment.

Anemia is a major one of the health problem in India. Hearing loss is found to associated with iron deficiency anemia because the cochlea is highly susceptible to ischemic damage since only the labyrinthine arteries supplies blood to this area.

Kathleen. M. Schieffer BS, et al conducted a prevalence study in which there was association between iron deficiency anemia and hearing loss was found.

Hearing impairments vary from a mild loss to profound deafness. So such children need special school for education. The teachers of special school should made aware of health education regarding nutritional anemia, care of hearing impaired children.

As the disabled children found to be physically weak in health, researcher took interest to evaluate the haemoglobin level of hearing impaired children.

II. OBJECTIVE

To asses haemoglobin level among hearing impaired students.

ABSTRACT

Diabetes mellitus (DM), is a metabolic disorders characterized by a high blood sugar level over a prolonged period of time due to the hyposecretion of insulin from the pancreas. Symptoms often include frequent urination, increased thirst, and increased hunger. If left untreated, diabetes can cause many complications. Statement of The Problem: Assess the risk of prediabetes among adult between the age of 45-75 years in Ambalapara Gramapanchayath. Objectives: i) to assess the relation between BMI and diabetes, ii) to assess the relation between BMR and diabetes iii) to assess the risk of prediabetes among adult between the age of 45-75 years. Methodology: Descriptive study, structured can risk questionnaire used to identify the risk of pre diabetes or type 2 diabetes mainly for adults between the ages of 45 and 75 years, but may also be used for younger age groups in high risk populations. Result and Discussion: The descriptive statistics were used for the analysis of data. The analysis was carried out on the basis of objectives and hypothesis of the study. The result shows that the risk of prediabetes among adult in Ambalapara gramapanchayath is depended on the demographic variable of age. The result of the study was discussed according to the objectives. The highest score obtained is 34 and the lowest is 13. The mean value of BMI is 22.53. There are 19 members having BMI less than 21 kg/m² (low risk for prediabetes). There are 40 members having BMI between 21-32 kg/m² (moderate risk for prediabetes). There is 1 member having BMI greater than 32 kg/m² (high risk for prediabetes).

Keywords: diabetes, Prediabetes, BMI, BMR

INTRODUCTION

Diabetes was described in an Egyptian manuscript from 1500 BCE mentioning "too great emptying of the sweet urine. It is identified by the ant around the urine like sugar. The Ebers papyrus includes a recommendation for a drink to take in such cases [1].

Diabetes is a chronic disease due to the impaired function of pancreas. Diabetes occurs in one of the following situations: The pancreas (an organ behind the stomach) produces little insulin or no insulin at all. Insulin is a naturally occurring hormone, produced by the beta cells of the pancreas, which helps the body use sugar for energy [2, 3]. Or inadequate sensitivity of cells to the action of insulin. This condition is called insulin resistance.

The common symptoms characterized by a high blood sugar level includes frequent urination, increased thirst, and increased hunger. 3ps- polyuria, polyphagia and polydipsia. If left untreated can cause diabetic ketoacidosis, hyperosmolar hyperglycemic state, or death. Long-term increase of blood sugar cause damage to the major organs such as heart - cardiovascular disease, brain-stroke, kidney-chronic kidney disease, foot ulcers due to peripheral nerve damage and damage to the eyes (retinopathy) [4, 5].

NEED FOR THE STUDY

Diabetes is one of the fastest growing health challenges of the 21st century, with the number of adults living with diabetes having more than tripled over the past 20 years. The global diabetes prevalence in 2019 is estimated to be 9.3% (463 million people), rising to 10.2% (578 million) by 2030 and 10.9% (700 million) by 2045. The prevalence is higher in urban (10.8%) than rural (7.2%) areas, and in high-income (10.4%) than low-income countries (4.0%). One in two (50.1%) people living with diabetes do not know that they have diabetes (IDF Diabetes Atlas committee, 2019).

The rising prevalence of diabetes and other non-communicable diseases is driven by a combination of factors - rapid urbanization, sedentary lifestyles, unhealthy diets, tobacco use, and increasing life expectancy. Obesity and overweight are the most important risk factors responsible for diabetes. The diabetes burden can be prevented or delayed by behavioural changes

Abstract

Home remedies are natural cures or medicines made at home from natural ingredients such as herbs, vegetables and fruits and have given more attention due to its nature and cure. Many common illness are present in the under 10 children. It can be treated at home without needing to consult the doctor so a Pre-experimental one group pretest posttest study was conducted to assess the effectiveness of structured teaching programme regarding the knowledge on home management of selected minor illness among mothers of under 10 children and on statistical analysis and the results concluded that the mean posttest knowledge score obtained is 29.6 which is higher than the mean pretest knowledge score is 19.6. Paired t test was done to find out the difference between the mean pretest knowledge score, the calculated t value is (13.414) was found to be significant ($p < 0.0001$) this shows that STP was effective in increasing the knowledge regarding the home management of minor illness.
